

Your Personal Network – Example

It's not what you know; it's who you know! Networking is possibly one of the most valuable tools you can have when looking for work. Most of the time jobs are found through personal connections, and while your resume may be the clincher for you getting the job, your network is your golden ticket to get your foot in the door.

You may not think it but no matter, who you are, your network is huge! Even if you think you don't get out much once you know one person, you're automatically connected to 5 more!

Your Personal Network

Draw up your own personal network starting with you as the centre point. Think long and hard. Who has contacts that could link you to a job? Even if you don't know a person's name, you can still add them.
